Beverige of Indians.

Wet Trend Evident

Last Tuesday's election in many states also revealed tremendous desire for amendment of the Volstead act. for amendment of the Volstead act. This was evident a long time before the election. Friends of Senator Frelinghuysen, for example, realized that he probably would be defeated because of his dry stand by the extremely wet Mr. Edwards. This is best evidenced by the desperate effort of the Republicans of New Jersey to turn the issu from booze to road contracts, or any thing else they could think of. The knew that New Jersey was wet and that Frelinghuysen's dry stand was carrying him down to defeat. New the wets hope perhaps they wets point out that a tax on light wines and beer is the only tax which the country would pay cheerfully and yet which would provide the huge amount of money needed for the benus.

Drys Ridicule Bill The drys, of course, ridicule the idea that enough votes could be mustered efter in the House or Senate to put such an amendment on the bonus bill. They say that the dry Scinators and Representatives, no matter how much they favored the bonus and no matter how much they favored the bonus and no matter hew rigorously they might be opposed to any taxes which would raise sufficient revenue, would nevertheless vote solidly against a beer and wine amendment to the bonus bill.

solidly against a beer and wine amendment to the bonus bill.
So far as a hasty canvass of wets and drys now in Washington could reveal the contention of the drys seems to be the more logical. This does not after the fact that the wets are jubilant as a result of President Harding's letter to Mrs. Robinson and that they proses to make this fight to tie the main legislation on the bonus bill.

Governor on January 1 Alfred E. Smith will approach the New York City transit problem with an open mind, he said last night. Its handling will be the subject of the most exhaustive study he can bring to bear upon it.

Development of the Port Authority plan is being retarded by indifferenc and lack of co-operation on the part of the railroads entering New York City, he added, and vigorous public opinion must be put behind the project in order that the men who are standing in its way will understand they are blocking the growth of the greatest port in

Mr. Smith made his first public ap searance since his election as the prinpearance since his election as the principal speaker at the 154th annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, at the Waldorf-Astoria. In addition to appealing for support of the Port Authority from the business men gathered to hear him, he urged them to back the State Barge Canal and to give him their steadfast assistance in his plan of reorganizing the state government by constitutional amendment.

Everything Not All Right "Everything is not all right as far as the Port Authority is concerned,"

Remarking that the Chamber of Commerce played a large part in the preliminary working up of the plans for the treaty with the State of New Jersey, but that then, like all other business and civic bodies, they regarded the matter as finished too soon, he continued:

The Premier then went to the Senate and delivered the same speech, being greeted with no less enthusiasm than was exhibited in the chamber. Soon afterward he returned to the chamber, where speeches were made by deputies representing five groups, none of whom, however, attacked the government openly, although Deputy Rosadi, Democrat, taunted Mussolini, saying:

After this advanced survey he informed President Ebert of his readiness to accept the Chancellorship-and then left for Hamburg for the purpose of adjusting affairs in connection with his position on the Hamburg-American Line. It is not believed that he will acceed in definitely constituting the new Ministry before Monday.

Herr Cuno is an old friend of President Ebert's, and was first in line among the so-called neutral public leaders whom the President had in view as meeting his conception of leader of a ministry which would undertake the nation's economic reconstruction along broad and non-nartisan lines.

The Chancellor-designate conferred with Gustav Stresemann, leader of the United Socialists; former Chancellor Fehrenbach, of the Chericals, and Chairman Peterson, of the Democratic party, before going to Hamburg.

The opinion is held in Reichstag circles that Heirr Cuno, who is wholly a novice in Parliamentary affairs, at least has the advantage of being unincumbered by party affiliations and that he is qualified to deal objectively with the aerimonious situation growing out of the present crisis, and might even succeed in reconciling the warring factions to a patriotic program of national reconstruction based on mutual inter-party good will and understanding.

The Premier spoke in his usual clear, incisive tones at first while explaining his program. His voice was low, but was heard plainly throughout the semi-circle. Later, when warning the Deputies that the House would be aissolved and their mandates withdrawn if they refused confidence in his government, the sharp ring of his voice clarioned to all nooks and corners of the huge building.

The only attempt at interruption was made by Deputy Modigliani, Socialist, who, when Mussolini threatened dissolution, shouted somewhat timidly: "Long live the Parliament." The leaders of the Fascisti merely glared at him, while the Right and Center sections cheered.

That Mussolini intends to reach a quick vote was indicated when he refused to permit the fifty-five orators, inscribed on the lists as intending to speak on the government's communication, to take the floor. There are many
